Undergraduate students majoring in Criminal Justice have an opportunity to select a course of study suitable for a variety of educational goals.

Criminal Justice majors have a wide range of diverse employment opportunities at the local, state, and federal levels of government. They include but are not limited to the various occupations that are associated with law enforcement, courts, the correctional system, probation and parole, and juvenile justice. The private sector also employs criminal justice majors in private security, loss prevention, and investigation.

Students majoring in criminal justice may also plan to go to law school or to pursue graduate study in criminal justice. The program is designed to provide a basic foundation for entry into graduate programs in criminal justice, criminal justice research, and careers involving corrections, law enforcement, and courts.

Undergraduate Program:
An overall survey of criminal justice is provided through the course: CRJU 100: Introduction to Criminal Justice. In addition to being a prerequisite for all upper-level criminal justice courses, this course exposes students to the major issues confronting the criminal justice system in America and to the principal parts of the system—police, courts, and corrections. Students who find the material in this course interesting are likely to find the rest of the criminal justice curriculum interesting as well. More focused coverage of specific areas is obtained through a wide variety of courses; these courses include courts and criminal process, police and society, corrections, diversity issues in CRJU, crime and criminal behavior, research methods, and critical perspectives in CRJU along with many electives such as wildlife crime, juvenile justice, criminal investigative theory, emergency management, deviant sexual behavior and criminal activity, forensic law, and criminal law and evidence, just to name a few.

The department of criminal justice offers both the bachelor of arts and the bachelor of science degrees to over 600 undergraduate students. A criminal justice undergraduate degree consists of 42 semester hours covering a wide range of interdisciplinary issues and topics. 24 of those 42 hours are Criminal Justice coursework that is required of all students who have declared the major; 12 hours are criminal justice electives and six hours are additional related requirements in psychology or sociology. Students must have earned a minimum of a 2.25 cumulative grade point average and 45 credit hours at Radford University to declare the major in Criminal Justice.

- B.A. (Bachelor of Arts): 120 hours
  The B.A. program consists of 43-45 hours of Core Curriculum coursework, six to eight hours of study in one foreign language, 42 hours in Criminal Justice and related requirements coursework and 25-29 credit hours of elective coursework.

- B.S. (Bachelor of Science): 120 hours
  The B.S. degree consists of 45-49 hours of Core Curriculum coursework, six hours of study in coursework for the bachelor of science requirements, 42 hours in Criminal Justice and related coursework, and 27-29 credit hours of elective coursework.

Students who do internships as part of their academic coursework have very high placement rates with criminal justice agencies after graduation. Alumni surveys suggest that those students wishing to become employed in criminal justice agencies are successful in obtaining professional positions if they are both focused in their job search and realistic regarding their expectations.
