POSC 320 provides a broad overview of the United States Congress. The course focuses on the founders and political development of Congress, as well as focusing on the relationships between Congress and the other branches of government. Class activities are filled with engaging discussions, debates, and simulations.

“The absolute best way to learn. If this could be incorporated into other classes it would be very beneficial for students.”

“I learned so much more this way [compared to a lecture and textbook method]. I didn’t really understand the way Congress worked until we did the simulation. It’s really frustrating at times.”
