2023 Administrative and Professional Faculty Senate Morale Survey Report

In July 2023, the AP Faculty Senate conducted its third morale survey of AP Faculty. The survey was sent to 319 AP Faculty members, and we received 183 responses, for a response rate of 57%. This is a significant increase over the 2022 survey, in which we had a response rate of 50%.

For most questions, AP Faculty were asked to select whether they strongly agreed, agreed, disagreed, or strongly disagreed with statements. Respondents were allowed to skip any question or choose to answer "no response/not applicable." The main part of the survey was divided into six sections, with a text entry question at the end of each section. Below, the multiple-choice responses are summarized with the main themes for the text entry comments included in that section.

Recommendation: When reviewing the University's two-year strategic plan, there appear to be recurring themes in the AP morale survey that are consistent with goals related to repositioning resources for affordability and implementing an integrated workforce development model. Using the AP Morale survey (and potentially other Internal Governance surveys) to enhance the evaluation of these strategic plan metrics, we suggest the survey feedback be incorporated as it is directly from the constituents. This approach would provide the President with valuable insights from the constituents directly affected by the initiatives implemented to achieve the goals of the strategic plan. This gives opportunity to AP, staff, and faculty to offer honest feedback on the initiatives and allows them the ability to provide recommendations.

Section One: Job Security and Satisfaction (Questions 3-9)

The trends continue where AP Faculty find their roles to be rewarding and take pride in their work; however, nearly a quarter say they do not feel secure in their employment, and 45% feel their salary is unfair. When asked why AP Faculty would leave Radford University, the top factors include; better opportunities elsewhere, and job insecurity/contract renewal issues.

- Instability with Leadership
- Instability with the University
- Inequitable salaries and insufficient compensation for increased duties/responsibilities
- Increasing workloads
- Lack of growth opportunities

Section Two: Work-Life Balance (Questions 10-16)

Almost all respondents expressed satisfaction with their university benefits, though approximately one quarter did not feel comfortable taking time away from work. Work contributing positively to mental well-being continues to stay on trend, but almost half of the respondents say their work contributes negatively to their physical health, which is a nearly 10% increase from last year. Almost 30% of respondents spend 7 or more hours a week outside of their regular work schedule. This is a 6% increase from last year. The main reasons given were: to meet a deadline, workload is too large, and they are passionate about their work.

- High turnover, short-staffing, and increasing workloads result in poor work-life balance and burnout
- One-year contracts cause job insecurity and anxiety
- Competitive pay, salary compression and heavier workloads without additional compensation are concerns

Section Three: Professional Development (Questions (17-23)

Survey respondents express their supervisors support professional development; however, there isn't adequate funding to provide it. In addition, employees said they don't feel they can take time away from the office for professional development opportunities. In alignment with prior surveys, more than half of the respondents did not feel they could advance their careers while remaining at Radford University.

- Budget and workload constraints lead to individuals pursuing professional development on their own time
- Professional development is dependent on supervisor support, and while many supervisors support professional development, it is offered unequally
- It is necessary to leave Radford to advance in one's career

Section Four: Respect and Appreciation (Questions 24-30)

Individual respect in the workplace increased by 5%. One-third of survey respondents considered leaving the University because they felt isolated or unwelcomed. Overall respondents feel respected by their immediate coworkers for their expertise and as an individual. While respondents feel Radford University is welcoming and fair to employees, they do not feel respected by upper administration.

- Most respondents feel respected and valued within their team/department/division
- Outside of their area, respondents expressed issues with lack of respect, misinformation and feeling ignored
- Leadership doesn't respect/understand the workload which causes respondents to feel undervalued or overlooked

Section Five: Communication (Questions 31-36)

Half of respondents still agree that communication is timely and addressed their campus needs. Roughly 65% still agree they were included on relevant announcements. Overall, comments revealed different concerns.

- Communication with colleagues in their department are good, but silos and gatekeeping are problematic
- Upper management doesn't communicate well with employees in their areas. Respondents are not included in decisions that directly impact their job
- Important information, when shared, is often very late
- Post event information in one location besides just social media

Section Six: Leadership (Questions 37-44)

Respondents feel involvement in institutional planning has improved by 10%. Positive trends were seen in the leadership category with the exception of employee recognition, where nearly one-third of respondents feel their contributions are under-recognized.

- Hopeful about the direction from the President and new Vice Presidents
- Good relationship with my direct supervisor, but is non-existent up the ladder
- Many issues with supervisors could be improved with training

Additional Comments (Question 45):

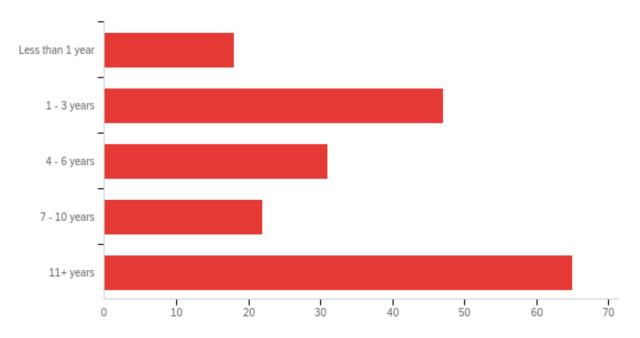

The last question asked AP Faculty to share additional comments. The main themes we received are below.

- There is still hope for positive changes with new leadership and investment in staff and students
- Happy and fulfilled employees = happy and returning students. Employee morale/workloads are threats to this formula
- We need more pride in Radford. People on the front lines should only be wearing Radford, not other college apparel
- There is concern about the recent retirement of individuals with a wealth of institutional knowledge, which, combined with turnover and staffing shortages, poses challenges
