An individual who completed the program during the academic year being reported is counted as a program completer and not an enrolled student.

Description of strategies used to achieve goal, if applicable:

The special education general curriculum five-year program recruits from Elementary Education majors who have concentrations in Special Education. Elementary education majors who concentrated in special education and Special Education majors are co-placed in schools so that students can experience and participate in the collaboration that occurs between general and special education teachers. We formally added this as an option in our catalog for both Elementary Education and Deaf and Hard of Hearing majors in the spring of 2014, and we began to use fliers with this information as a formal recruiting tool in fall 2014, so we anticipate growing numbers within a year or two.

Recruitment continues through outreach and materials provided to community colleges, participants at ASCD, VCASE, VCLD, and other conferences; webpage updates; and presentations at meetings of regional Directors of Special Education and periodic personal discussions with these Directors. Faculty maintain excellent relations with alumni of the programs via social media, email mentoring, and other avenues. Our alumni are excellent recruiters for our programs and send their friends, family, community members, and students from their schools to our programs.

Description of steps to improve performance in meeting goal or lessons learned in meeting goal, if applicable:

In order to improve our recruitment efforts, we have started to provide rolling admissions during the year. We found that many of the potential graduate students are still exploring options at a period of time other than our traditional admissions process.

Prospective special education teachers are prepared in core academic subjects and to instruct in core academic subjects.

Yes

Prospective general education teachers are prepared to provide instruction to students with disabilities.

Yes

Prospective general education teachers are prepared to provide instruction to limited English proficient students.

Yes

Prospective general education teachers are prepared to provide instruction to students from low-income families.

Yes

Prospective teachers are prepared to effectively teach in urban and rural schools, as applicable.

Yes

Describe your institution's most successful strategies in meeting the assurances listed above:

Preparation is closely linked with the needs of schools and the instructional decisions new teachers face in the classroom. We utilize all professional standards outlined in the Council for Exceptional Children in our coursework, along with the Virginia Standards of Learning. We teach evidence-based practices outlined by the USDOE and VADOE, as well as those outlined in our licensure regulations.

We have partnerships and advisory boards with LEAs which creates on-going opportunities for the college and the LEAs to stay attuned to one another's needs and provide each other with feedback. Our students are fully immersed at our partnership sites and end their programs with many additional hours above the minimum required for licensure.

Students in all teacher preparation programs take either EDSP 361 or EDSP 404/504. These are introductory special education courses. Some students in these general education programs are being co-placed with students in special education. The majority of our students in teacher preparation programs are placed in inclusive settings, so they are experiencing working with students with disabilities, students who are gifted, students who are English language learners and from a wide array of economic background in these general education classrooms.

The majority of graduate students take multicultural education which is a required core course and addresses limited English proficiency students. Foundations courses required of all students address socio-economic status, and rural, urban and suburban contexts. We continue to practice curricular mapping with our professional standards across programs to look for gaps, repetition, and areas in need of revision or improvement.

Section IV Low-Performing

Provide the following information about the approval or accreditation of your teacher preparation program.

Is your teacher preparation program currently approved or accredited?

Yes

If yes, please specify the organization(s) that approved or accredited your program:

State
NCATE

Is your teacher preparation program currently under a designation as "low-performing" by the state (as per section 207(a) of the HEA of 2008)?

No

Section V Use of Technology

Provide the following information about the use of technology in your teacher preparation program. Please note that choosing 'yes' indicates that your teacher preparation program would be able to provide evidence upon request.

Does your program prepare teachers to:

- integrate technology effectively into curricula and instruction
Yes
- use technology effectively to collect data to improve teaching and learning
Yes
- use technology effectively to manage data to improve teaching and learning
Yes
- use technology effectively to analyze data to improve teaching and learning
Yes

Provide a description of the evidence that your program uses to show that it prepares teachers to integrate technology effectively into curricula and instruction, and to use technology effectively to collect, manage, and analyze data in order to improve teaching and learning for the purpose of increasing student academic achievement. Include a description of the evidence your program uses to show that it prepares teachers to use the principles of universal design for learning, as applicable. Include planning activities and a timeline if any of the four elements listed above are not currently in place.

The general approach to ensuring teacher education students can successfully integrate technology within their practice includes the facilitation of strategies for using technology to improve instruction, community-building, management of teaching resources, and professional development. An important aspect of using technology to improve instruction includes learning how to use technology to collect and analyze student achievement data in an effort to identify areas of need for subsequent instructional events (formative evaluation techniques).

Regular education students take technology courses at the undergraduate and graduate levels. Special Education students take a new co-listed undergraduate/graduate course on assistive technology. Regular education students with a special education class also take the assistive technology class. All the technology classes offered in STEL's education programs are informed by global technological trends and the latest research on how people learn best with the help of technology, yet they remain grounded in practical classroom applications.

The special education technology courses emphasize adaptive and assistive technologies and the role they can play within individual education plans. In addition, the importance of Universal Design for Learning (UDL) principles and how these are applied within web-supported instructional experiences are addressed. UDL principles are reviewed in the courses, and students get practice evaluating instructional support websites based on these principles.

Students in these graduate technology courses develop online portfolios presenting artifacts that can be used as evidence for determining the degree to which the technology outcomes are achieved. These portfolios include a number of artifacts aligned with the Use of Technology outcomes. Links to student portfolios can be provided if/when needed.

Section VI Teacher Training

Provide the following information about your teacher preparation program. Please note that choosing 'yes' indicates that your teacher preparation program would be able to provide evidence upon request.

Does your program prepare general education teachers to:

- teach students with disabilities effectively
Yes
- participate as a member of individualized education program teams
Yes
- teach students who are limited English proficient effectively
Yes

Provide a description of the evidence your program uses to show that it prepares general education teachers to teach students with disabilities effectively, including training related to participation as a member of individualized education program teams, as defined in section 614(d)(1)(B) of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, and to effectively teach students who are limited English proficient. Include planning activities and a timeline if any of the three elements listed above are not currently in place.

Special Education provides introductory courses as a service for general education students in elementary, middle and secondary education. These courses provide content on special education services, the roles and responsibilities of general educators related to students with exceptional learning needs, and methods of accommodating and instructing diverse learners. All of the required introductory special education courses for general education teachers address special education law and regulations that pertain to individualized education programs, plans and teams.

Does your program prepare special education teachers to:

Candidates who are pursuing undergraduate or graduate programs in special education all take introductory classes that address special education law and regulations related to IEPs and serving students with disabilities. All special education candidates take special education coursework that focuses on collaboration and evaluation at the undergraduate and/or graduate levels. Developing an IEP is required within special education methods courses. Candidates in the five-year special education general and adapted curriculum program, also take general teaching methods courses in social studies, science, mathematics and reading, thus ensuring coursework that addresses the needs of all learners. Undergraduate students all take HUMD 300 which addresses linguistic and cultural diversity at each stage of language development and a graduate equivalent course is required for those candidates who were not undergraduate education majors. All candidates take EDEF 320 (or the graduate equivalent), an introductory foundations course that addresses how language and culture affect a student's life and learning. During field placements candidates must attend (and participate, as appropriate) in IEP, eligibility, behavior team, Rtl, and other meetings specific to serving students receiving special education services.

Section VII Contextual Information

Please use this space to provide any additional information that describes your teacher preparation program(s). You may also attach information to this report card. The U.S. Department of Education is especially interested in any evaluation plans or interim or final reports that may be available.

At Radford University, we offer opportunities for teacher training in all aspects of PK - 12 special education. We are the only institution in the commonwealth to offer all licensure options for special education, including being the sole providers of a program in deaf and hard of hearing. At the graduate level we offer programs of study in general curriculum, adapted curriculum, deaf and hard of hearing, visual impairment, and early childhood special education. We have fine-tuned five-year programs from which students graduate with licenses in two areas of education: (1) special education general and adapted curriculum, (2) early childhood/early childhood special education, (3) elementary education/special education general curriculum, and (4) deaf and hard of hearing/special education general curriculum. Memorandum of Understandings and Advisory Boards guide our work with partnership sites representing a wide variety of settings and stakeholders.
