Why did they do it? Case Studies in Criminology will explore the motivations and reasons for their deviance, as well as explore other deviants throughout the course of the semester. This immersive experience will bring together Radford University students with individuals currently incarcerated at the New River Valley Regional Jail to discuss how the criminological theories that shaped these deviants, shaped them as well. Class size is limited to 10 students. Selection for the class will be based on an application and interview process. If interested in participating in this unique course, please submit an application to either Dr. Egan Green (ekgreen@radford.edu) or Dr. Riane Bolin (rbolin1@radford.edu). Applications are due by March 23, 2018.
