COLLEGE OF VISUAL AND PERFORMING ARTS

This past May and June, MFA Photography student David C. Rehor had the opportunity to intern with world famous portrait photographer Judith Joy Ross at her home in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. There, he was trained by Mark Osterman of The George Eastman House to use a rare collodion-chloride gold toning process to produce images that were previously unseen by the public for an upcoming show in Madrid, Spain. Additionally, David was tasked with archiving a body of Ms. Ross' work for the New York Public Library under the supervision of renowned curator and photography book publisher, Joshua Chuang. David Rehor credits Radford University for helping him make this life changing experience become a reality.
