f. The child care initiative is ongoing. Faculty member Agida Manizade is coordinating the efforts of the task force, whose other members are Bethany Mott and Sandy Beland. The task force has visited RU West and other locations to scout possible spaces for a childcare center.

i. The search for a Core Curriculum director is complete, but no official announcement has been made because contract details are being worked out.

j. Among the recommendations from SACS is that RU hire an Assistant Vice President for Assessment. RU has screened forty applicants, four phone interviews have been conducted, and campus visits will take place soon.

k. A search firm will be involved in the search for a Vice President for Enrollment Planning and Management.

l. The Honors Academy task force may recommend that the program be scaled down and made more rigorous. A forum on the honors program will be held on Tuesday, September 18, 2012, from 3:30-5:00 p.m. in Room 320 of the COBE building.

m. The International Education Task Force is considering a model of international education that shifts the emphasis away from RU faculty taking groups of students abroad in favor of immersion experiences such as those provided by exchange programs. Currently Dr. Dennis Grady, with the assistance of Dr. Laura Jacobsen, is exploring the possibility of an exchange program with Brazil, and Dr. Joe Scartelli, with the assistance of Dr. Webster-Garrett, is looking at the possibility of an exchange program with Cuba.

n. A RFP will shortly be coming out for the Academic Affairs initiative involving collaborative alternative semesters in which a student cohort enrolls in a bloc of thematically-related courses. A team is being put together to review proposals.

In response to the review, the vice presidents, with the exception of Vice President for University Advancement Dee Robinson, are moving to the third floor of Martin Hall. This move will probably take place sometime in October.
r. During the 2011-2012 year, the Council of Deans drafted a First Amendment resolution that Dr. Jacobsen characterized as “progressive” and “liberal-minded.” This proposal has since been subject to revision, and discussion of the changes is ongoing.

s. Dr. Jacobsen asked Dr. Erin Webster-Garrett, director of the QEP, to say a few words about that program. Dr. Webster-Garrett reported that the initiative is now in its pilot year. The QEP team has responded to recommendations received from SACS, and they urge faculty to provide feedback as well. The program has been assigned a graduate assistant and has received approval for a staff member to work on an eportfolio initiative. In addition, the program will benefit from the planned hiring of the Assistant Vice President for Assessment. Grants are available through the QEP to support course projects and co-curricular programming, information about these grants, as well as about many events, is available at the QEP website [http://www.radford.edu/content/qep/home.html]. Previous senate minutes noted that a search firm would be used to assist with the VPEM search, but in order to save resources, such a firm will not after all be employed.
   b. The process of selecting a new executive leadership intern is underway, and the new intern will begin serving in spring 2013.
   c. The Honors Task Force report was provided to campus community the previous week, and the provost is awaiting direction from the Faculty Senate regarding the next steps. A report to faculty regarding international education will be scheduled soon.

Members of the administration indicate that at this point there has been a net loss of sixteen faculty/staff spots, that reserved slots are being reassessed, that a parking garage is not an option, and that bus lines servicing peripheral parking lots, including the Burlington lot, are one solution. e. An amendment was moved from the floor that “If steps 1 and 2 are not completed to the satisfaction of the Faculty Senate, then Core 201 and 202 will be discontinued.” During discussion, this was amended to “If steps 1 and 2 are not completed to the satisfaction of the Faculty Senate, then the Faculty Senate will explore ways to discontinue Core 201 and Core 202.” The motion, as amended, failed.

f. An amendment was moved from the floor to alter the sentence “Radford University administration will develop a staffing strategy for Core 201 and 202 and departmental courses that meet the learning outcomes for Core 201 and 202, including some provision for new faculty resources within departments” to “Radford University will develop a long-term staffing plan and departmental courses that meet the learning outcomes for Core 201 and 202 that increasingly moves us from adjunct to full time positions.” The motion carried.

g. Webster Garrett

Members Absent: Vicky Bierman, Robert Boross, Michael King, Elizabeth Lanter, Charles Manyara, Monica Pazmino, Skip Watts

Guests: President Penelope Kyle; Neils Christiansen, Assistant Director of the Honors Academy; Joe King, Director of the Honors Academy;

I. The meeting was called to order at 3:30 p.m.
II. The minutes from the September 27, 2012, meeting were approved as read.
III. A motion was made and seconded to amend the agenda to cancel all reports with the exception of the report from President Kyle. The motion carried.
IV. President Kyle’s remarks to the Senate:
   a. President Kyle congratulated the faculty for taking on IG reform and stated that she thought the hiring of a consultant had been a good move and that by the end of the year progress would be made.
   b. The President reported that in terms of attendance Family Weekend/Homecoming had been very successful, and she thanked faculty who participated.
   c. The President reported that more than fifty people had attended the reception inaugurating the Diversity Dialogue Series. She also stated that she thinks that diversity should become an ongoing concern, with a steering committee or task force assigned to look into diversity issues. This advisory group would report directly to the president and her cabinet. Dr. Kyle urged interested faculty to contact their deans or to ask permission to email Provost Minner directly and copy to their deans.
   d. The President reported on the state of the university’s budget. She stated that when the recession hit, the university chose to make Academic Affairs its number one priority and that this was still the case. The university, she reported, was on the rebound in terms of hiring. Forty full-time faculty have been added since the low point in terms of staffing, and the university has twenty more faculty than it did at the point at which the plunge occurred. She also stated that money is available for hiring and that the university needs to spend this money. In terms of budgeting, departments and divisions now know their budgets no later than the middle of July, a change from what has been historically true at RU. The President spoke of a $3.5 million increase in funding for Academic Affairs that must be spent by June 30, 2013, as opposed to a $750,000 increase in funding for other divisions. She also stated that the university needs to propose “grand things” for RU to the General Assembly.
e. The President reported that she has met with Delegate Joe Yost and discussed plans for a building to house CHBS. More schools have been allowed to plan for new buildings than will receive approval. The President described the process as a "beauty contest."

f. The President discussed the possibility of launching new degree programs and urged faculty to step forward with proposals. She stated that we are competing with other institutions and that we need to catch the eye of the General Assembly. A focus on STEM-H is desirable. In addition, the university’s graduate programs are an asset.

g. The President reported that a bonus will be forthcoming in December and a 2% increase in June provided certain criteria are met. President Kyle, Vice President Alvarez, and Provost Minner have been having conversations on the issue of equity. The President is aware that there has been some criticism of the process that led to equity adjustments last year. Salary adjustments must be made based on what the university can do internally, as no state support is anticipated for this purpose. The President stated that will not be sufficient money to rapidly bring salaries to the 60th percentile. She observed that the Faculty Senate would be an appropriate group for vetting ideas about how to address salary issues. Dr. Jacobsen observed that the Resource Allocation Committee was one Senate body that is currently examining this issue.

h. Discussion followed the President’s remarks:
   - One senator inquired as to how much money is available internally for salary adjustments. President Kyle stated that she, Vice President Alvarez, and Provost Minner would determine the amount and convey that information to the chair of the Resource Allocation Committee.
   - Regarding diversity, one senator observed that the university’s IG document mandates a Diversity and Equity Action Committee. The senator asked why another committee was necessary. President Kyle stated that she never hears from this committee. Dr. Jacobsen reported to the president that the committee hadn’t been convened. Dr. Kyle asked whether members had been appointed to this committee. Dr. Jacobsen reported that members had been appointed and stated that she would send a list of members to the president.
   - There was a brief discussion of the need for a healthy flow of information between the faculty, the administration, and the BOV. Dr. Kyle stated that she is delighted that Dr. Jacobsen in serving as the faculty representative to the BOV and that Dr. Jacobsen is also attending cabinet meetings. Dr. Jacobsen is working to set up a social event for both the BOV and the Faculty Senate membership.

V. Under Old Business, the Motion re: Improving Delivery of Core 201 and Core 202, as amended September 27, 2012, was removed from the table.

a. The Curriculum Committee proposed that the sentence “Radford University administration will develop a long-term staffing plan for Core 201 and 202 and departmental courses that meet the learning outcomes for Core 201 and 202 that increasingly moves us from adjunct to full time positions” be replaced by the sentence “Radford University administration will develop a staffing strategy for Core 201 and 202 and departmental courses that meet the learning outcomes for Core 201 and 202, including some provision for new full-time faculty resources within departments with the ultimate goal of moving to all sections being taught by full-time faculty.” The proposed amendment came from committee moved and seconded.
b. After discussion, the Curriculum Committee withdrew the motion.
c. It was moved that the question be called on the Motion re: Improving Delivery of Core 201 and Core 202, as amended September 27, 2012. The motion to call the question passed.

VII. Under New Business, the Motion re: Limiting Recruitment into the Honors Academy was introduced by the FSEC as a replacement for the Motion re: Discontinuing Recruitment into the Honors Academy, and the rules were suspended to allow for a discussion of the replacement motion.

c. As the meeting approached its automatic adjournment, it was moved and seconded that debate be extended. The motion to extend debate carried.
d. After further discussion, it was moved and seconded that the motion be tabled. The motion to table carried.

VIII. The meeting adjourned at 4:53 p.m.
President Smolla was introduced by Dr. Laura Jacobsen, president of the Faculty Senate, who observed that the IG Task Force that has been working with President Smolla represented all constituencies: student, staff, AP faculty, and TR faculty.

President Smolla first spoke about his role, reviewing both the limitations and potential benefits of bringing in a consultant. As a limitation, he observed that he cannot have the feel for the culture of RU that is possessed by members of the RU community. He also observed that as a consultant he has no prescriptive authority, nor should he. Such authority would be unrealistic and not representative of the culture of higher education. He stated that changes to internal governance at RU must reflect widespread buy-in by all constituencies and that there must be a widespread sense of shared values and an enthusiasm that arises organically.

President Smolla also pointed out that the obverse of arriving without in-depth knowledge of the culture of RU is that he was not burdened with the baggage of bias and would be able to bring to bear objectivity and a fresh perspective. In addition, his lack of prescriptive authority freed him to be candid and to ask hard questions and allowed him the neutrality to help channel conversation without steering it toward a position in which he was invested.

He also stated that the meeting was intended to be an open forum rather than an occasion for him to deliver a report or an assessment, as delivering a report or assessment at this stage would cut off conversation. He did, however, provide a general overview of what he perceived to be the nature of the frustrations with internal governance at RU. He characterized these frustrations as falling into three categories. Some were responses to institutional values or culture. Some reflected managerial issues. Others were responses to inefficiencies arising from a cumbersome IG structure that had created a machine that was large, slow, and difficult to understand.

At this point President Smolla opened the floor to discussion.

The first speaker stated that “shared governance” was a contradiction in terms because by definition power is not shared. The speaker stated that he feels both frustrated by the current situation and resigned to it. President Smolla responded by reviewing how power is distributed at a university as opposed to a corporation. He began by pointing out that board membership may be determined in various ways (he characterized the process for VA state institutions as “political”) but that regardless of how boards are chosen, legal power to run university sits with a sovereign board. However, higher education is governed by a system of “constitutional checks and balances” overlaying a corporate structure. By tradition, university boards, unlike corporate ones, intentionally divide power. In higher education, one line of authority funnels power to the president, a second line of authority funnels power to the faculty, and core academic decisions are left to the faculty or to the faculty and president. At his own institution, President Smolla either defers to faculty or shares decision-making power with faculty on some issues. Some decisions may appear to be administrative versus academic, but in reality in almost any decision of consequence, the administrative overlaps with the academic. In the end, though, in a healthy governance culture the precise governing structure may not matter. Often of greater importance is whether members of the university community feel enough trust in other members to work their way through an issue.
The next speaker asked for President’s Smolla’s perception as to the strengths and weaknesses of the current IG document. President Smolla replied that its greatest weakness is its complexity, pointing out as an example an elaborate flow chart based upon the IG document. He also referenced the existence of three different senates as representing unnecessary complexity.

The next speaker asked whether RU should amend the existing IG document or start afresh. President Smolla stated that RU should start fresh. He referred again to the multiple senates, stating that mechanism should exist to provide non-faculty staff with a voice but questioning whether provision should be made for voting on certain issues. He suggested that RU might have “too much democracy” on matters that are not central to the university’s mission.

The next speaker commented on the perception that power was concentrated higher up, i.e., at the level of the BOV, and asked whether President Smolla had met with its members. President Smolla stated that he had not yet met with the BOV but that a retreat with the board was planned for February. The speaker stated that board was remote and that it was difficult to know where they stand. President Smolla stated that it is easy for boards to caricature faculty and faculty to caricature boards but that nationally there was a movement toward boards being more engaged and open. He also observed that the cultures of boards change as the membership changes and that RU’s board had recently experienced a turnover of a third of its membership.

The next speaker observed that the Faculty Senate works tirelessly but that it is limited to doing nothing more than making recommendations on issues such as resource allocation. As a result, the speaker stated, she “feels like a little rat running on a wheel.” President Smolla replied that at other universities resource allocation is an administrative issue. The faculty may take on an advisory role and some decentralization may be a possibility, but there will always be a central authority.

The next speaker asked whether President Smolla had any recommendations for keeping track of the status of motions and recommendations that come out of the Faculty Senate. President Smolla said that he had no specific recommendations beyond establishing clear timelines for action at the next level once a motion or recommendation advances beyond the senate.

The next speaker related an incident in which a high administrator appeared to be unfamiliar with the fact that the IG document mandated the existence of a standing committee to address certain issues and called for the creation of committee whose charge seemed to overlap with that of the standing committee. President Smolla was not able to address the incident in particular but speculated that there might have been a perception that another committee was necessary. He then asked the audience who possessed the legitimacy to make changes in cases where there was a consensus that change was necessary. One member of the audience stated that the power to change the internal governance of the institution stopped with the president and the cabinet and did not extend to the BOV. Another speaker stated that she believes that RU’s president is interested in IG reform. Returning specifically to the matter of committees, a speaker observed that appointments to IG committees are made but that committees are not convened. As a result, faculty feel that such committees are not valued. It may be the case, however, that the administrator was unaware of the role it was supposed to play in convening these committees.

The next speaker asked about the decline of tenure and suggested that adjuncts don’t feel the same connection with an institution as tenured/tenure track instructors. President Smolla stated that academic freedom is the soul of tenure and that tenure is not going away. He also stated that there are issues of cost and efficiency behind the hiring of adjuncts and that these are not dirty words: efficiency makes higher education accessible. He offered the analogy of law firms that rely on both equity and non-equity partners. In a follow up, another speaker asked whether it is better to have one adjunct teaching three courses or three adjuncts, each teaching one. President Smollas replied that Radford is complex enough to need the flexibility of “utility players” as well as adjuncts carried a larger load.

The next speaker asked whether Radford should be “starting over” versus reforming, observing that the university has a structure in place for reforming. President Smolla answered by outlining what he sees as desirable changes. Radford needs to eliminate duplication, e.g., multiple curriculum committees. The process requires the establishment of a representative group “with legitimacy” that, with consultation, can come up with streamlined structure, one that differentiates between the administrative and managerial versus the academic, that eliminates duplication and establishes clear lines of control. He concluded by stating that the process should “generate excitement” and result in an “elegant” structure, but also by acknowledging that there are “political issues” that will arise in any such process.

V. Dr. Jacobsen reported on her meeting with the rector and the vice rector of the BOV. Possible ways to further communication with faculty were discussed, such as town hall meetings with various constituencies, the inclusion of faculty on board committees, the establishment of a BOV committee with a focus on furthering communication, and the scheduling of social events that would allow faculty to interact with BOV members. The question of whether the Faculty Senate president should routinely serve as faculty representative to the BOV was discussed. The possibility of scheduling a meeting with Dr. Smolla was also discussed. A representative from the Attorney General’s office was present, and Dr. Jacobsen was advised that there is no legal requirement that the university adhere to the 133% rule.
VI. After her remarks, Dr. Jacobsen departed to attend a BOV meeting, and Dr. Kopf, vice president of the Faculty Senate, presided for the remainder of the meeting.
VII. Dr. Minner gave his report.

a. The university is pursuing several initiatives designed to decrease time to degree. (1) Two-hundred fifty students are enrolled in Wintermester. (2) University representatives have with our community college partners and will meet with K-12 partners to discuss the creation of low-cost degrees, in the range of $15,000. Prospective students would take prescribed courses during high school and would spend one year at a community college. First such degree may be in IT. (3) Another initiative would involve offering online summer courses in 2013 to admitted students.
b. The Provost reported on programmatic initiatives. (1) Faculty will decide on a new vision for the Honors Program. (2) A new director for International Education should be chosen soon. In addition, the university is considering partnering with a third party for delivery of ESL services. (An Executive Leadership Track is being created for the Doctorate of Nursing Practice. (3) Another applied doctorate is being considered, the Ed.D. This new track must receive first internal approval and then SCHEV approval. (3) A graduate degree in Environmental Science is being considered. (4) Discussions continue about programming at the Southwest Virginia Higher Education Center in Abingdon and the Roanoke Higher Education Center.

c. The Provost reported on initiatives to increase engagement. (1) Initially, up to three faculty teams will be supported for collaborative semester offerings. (2) A coordinator for the Undergraduate Research Forum will soon be named. (3) A staff member will be hired to cultivate internship possibilities in NOVA.

d. The Provost reported on several items related to the quality of the work environment. (1) Dr. Minner reminded faculty of the availability of the COACHE survey. (2) The Childcare Task Force has registered as a 501(C), a designation that would allow it to offer a child care program on their own if it so chooses, but the task force has also met with a private company that could rent space from RU to offer services. The task force has also looked at the possibility that existing programs, such as the one at Carillion, could be expanded to accommodate the RU community.

e. Regarding IG reform, the Provost stated that the 133% rule apparently is not, in fact, required by the state.

f. The 360 review is ongoing, with consultants on campus today.

g. A First Amendment policy is under discussion. Lately RU has been designated as ‘yellow’ by the Foundation for Individual Rights in Education, ‘green’ being the top designation and ‘red’ the lowest.

h. The Provost announced the appointment of the second Executive Leadership Intern: Dr. Jeanne Mekolichick.

i. Discussion followed the Provost’s remarks:
   - One senator wondered whether centralizing internships would be wise and suggested that internships were a departmental and curricular matter and that a burden would be placed on faculty who would have to furnish information to an internship office. The Provost replied that he was interested in another layer of reporting and that the staffer would live and work in NOVA and would be charged with developing internship opportunities in NOVA. The senator stated that his department received more offers of internships than it had interns so that locating internships was not a problem. Another senator stated that for her department locating internships was a problem. The Provost observed that a staffer located in NOVA would be able to look in on interns in that area.

IV. Dr. Jacobsen gave her report.
   a. The COACHE survey has closed and results are expected by the end of spring semester.
   b. At the cabinet meeting faculty travel was discussed. Travel requests need to be submitted in a timely fashion and in accordance with guidelines. Reimbursement requests should be submitted within thirty days after the conclusion of travel. Requests involving travel by four or more people to the same venue and international travel require approval of the president, so it is especially important to get these requests in to allow for the additional level of approval.
   c. The governor does not want universities to take positions on legislation being considered by the General Assembly, but the Faculty Senate of Virginia has taken positions on bills. The proposal that BOVs include voting faculty has been tabled, but the proposal that BOVs include nonvoting faculty and student members has been approved by subcommittee. The proposal that certain faculty be allowed to switch from optional retirement programs to the VRS is still under consideration in subcommittee, and the 50% tuition waiver is still being discussed.
   d. The implementation of the Affordable Care Act may affect one hundred employees who are paid for 1,500 hours over a nine-month period because they would exceed the thirty hours a week that triggers eligibility for health care.
   e. Regarding IG reform, the Provost stated that the 133% rule apparently is not, in fact, required by the state. Twenty-five to thirty adjuncts who teach more than nine credit hours per semester will also be affected.
   f. The six-year plan is due to Richard Alvarez, Vice President for Finance and Administration, by February 8, 2013, and reports are transitional adjustments from this year to next are due by February 21, 2013.
g. Dr. Jacobsen reported on issues that would be raised at the next BOV meeting. Internal governance consultant Rod Smolla would be meeting with the BOV. Dr. Jacobsen plans to address IG reform, as well as faculty morale and faculty salaries, which are at the twenty-first percentile of Radford University’s peer group. She will also address the fact that the university’s student/faculty ration, at nineteen to one, is the next-to-highest in Virginia. She is also discussing the status of internal governance reform, faculty morale, faculty salaries.

h. Discussion followed the Dr. Jacobsen’s remarks:
   - One senator asked for verification of the source of the instruction that universities not take stands on legislative initiatives. Dr. Kennan stressed that the request came from the governor. Dr. Jacobsen responded to another question that individuals were free to take positions even if the university could not. Also discussed was the retention plan. Dr. Jacobsen stated that initiatives were coming forward, and Dr. Kennan reported that money has been proposed for retention initiatives and that deans were voting on their priorities. Another question was on staffing plans and the prospects of Radford University moving toward the sixtieth percentile in terms of salaries. Dr. Kennan replied that neither was reflected on current spreadsheets and that proposals needs to be tied to the STEM-H initiative but that these issues were on the provost’s radar.

V. Ms. Bodo, Director of Assessment, and Dr. Cubbison, Director of the Core Curriculum Program, spoke about a revised assessment plan for the Core. The revised plan is intended to reflect the new outcomes and to be affordable. It would retain artifacts and rubrics. It would assess a smaller number of assignments and a smaller number of students but would still meet the university’s needs in terms of continuing Core development and in terms of SCHEV and SACS requirements.
