Cost of Attendance/Budget Re-evaluation Request Information

Academic Year 2020 -2021

In compliance with federal regulations, the Financial Aid Office at Radford University has determined a cost of attendance (COA) for students that includes tuition and fees, books and supplies, housing, food, transportation and personal expenses. These components are costs that relate to the individual student and are educational in nature as specified in the Higher Education Act. Although we feel that the cost allotted does represent realistic cost associated with attending our university, we also understand that the costs allotted may not be enough for every student and that sometimes the amount we allot does not cover unusual expenses.

If you feel that the COA allotted to you does not represent your actual cost, you can submit a request to have your COA re-evaluated. Each cost of attendance appeal will be reviewed on an individual basis by the Financial Aid Office. Although Financial Aid Administrators are allowed to make adjustments to the established components in the COA, we are not allowed to create additional or new categories. Please keep in mind that standard budgets for the award year cover only the period of time when students are enrolled at least half-time in a qualified and approved degree program.

It is also important to note that if an increase is added to your COA, it only allows for you to borrow more in loan funds. It does not increase your grant eligibility.

The most common requests for an increase in COA are:

- Purchase of a needed computer
- Cost of child care – for independent students
- Cost of books and supplies that are above average
- Cost of transportation necessary for education

There are some items that will not be considered:

- Consumer bills/debts not related to education
- Pet or hobby expenses
- Vacations
- Weddings
- Gifts
- Payments towards a 2nd home
Please find the description below that best fits your situation and supply the needed information to the Financial Aid Office.
