We understand that there are times when a family may have a special circumstance that prevents them from being able to contribute as much as they would like towards education. This is why we allow for students to submit a Special Circumstance Appeal to our office for review. Special circumstances are situations that make the information provided on the FAFSA form not reflective of the family’s ability to pay educational costs. These differences can vary due to the changes that have occurred since the tax information used on the FAFSA was filed or since the completion of the FAFSA was done. A job loss, a death in the family, divorce in the family, loss of child support or excessive medical expenses are just some of the things that can change.

When the FAFSA is completed, calculations to determine the Expected Family Contribution (EFC) are done. The calculations already have an Income Protection Allowance worked into the formula. Please keep this in mind when you are looking to complete a Special Circumstance Appeal. Also remember that Special Circumstance Appeals are done to help lower the student’s EFC. Therefore, if a student’s EFC is already 0, then no additional changes to the EFC can take place.

Here is the break-down of the Income Protection Allowance based on the size of the family and the number of students in college.

For each additional college student (except parents), subtract $3,250.
Below we have provided an outline of what is included in the income protection allowance. In order for us to consider your expenses in any category you will be required to provide explanation and evidence that your expenses exceed the protection allowance.

Personal Care includes haircuts, hair dressing, toothpaste, shaving supplies, shampoo and other toiletries. |
| Medical Care                | 11%                            | This includes medical and dental expenses not covered by insurance, health insurance premiums (medical, dental, vision), co-pays, and deductibles.            |
| Other Family Consumption    | 12%                            | This includes newspapers, magazines, entertainment, recreation (hobbies, sports), vacation, life insurance, and disability insurance. |
When determining financial aid eligibility, the following are not and cannot be included or considered in our analysis, therefore they will not qualify as a special circumstance request:

Unwillingness to contribute to education; payments or cost of a 2nd home; consumer debts; vacations; weddings; gifts; extracurricular activities; pets; housekeeping; ownership of a luxury vehicle; inability to pay expected family contribution; etc.

If, after reviewing the above information, you feel that you and/or your family would like to bring a situation to our attention and proceed with the Special Circumstance Appeal, then the first step is to write a detailed letter explaining your family situation and/or how expenses have changed. You must provide proper documentation or proof of your appeal. The information you provide will be used to determine IF changes or adjustments can be made to your FAFSA information to present a more accurate or realistic picture of your family’s ability to contribute towards the cost of education. Each request is considered and looked at on a case-by-case basis. Adjustments of financial aid awards, are subject to the availability of funds at the time. Please know that additional documentation may be requested if we find that more information is needed to make a final determination. Please allow at least eight weeks after the last of your documentation has been received for your request to be reviewed, processed and finalized.

Please review the information below that best fits your situation and provide the needed documentation.
